Thank you to our Speaker
Erik Ristuben, Chief Investment Strategist
Russell Investments

Erik Ristuben team’s responsibilities include the creation and management of integrated client investment strategies for Russell institutional and retail clients globally, as well as the creation of Russell’s global economic and market outlooks. Erik serves as a principal spokesperson. He is a frequent guest on television and radio networks. He is quoted frequently in national business and trade publications. As a senior member of the investment division, Erik serves as a member of Russell’s investment strategy committee and the investment risk management committee. Prior to this role, Erik was the CIO, Client Investment Strategies and CIO of North America. From 2003 to 2008, as managing director of client investment strategies, Erik led the investment team responsible for all U.S. balanced funds. Prior to this, Erik held a number of senior positions focused on the creation of client investment strategies at Russell. He has been with Russell since 1985.

May 1 Membership Luncheon

Thank you to our Sponsor
Councilmember Pete von Reichbauer
King County Council

Listen to the beginning of understanding.

Thank you to 2013 Chairman Circle Members
Dear Chamber Members,

For those of you who attended the annual Economic Forecast Breakfast in January, I hope you caught the same message I did: create the identity, roll up your sleeves, get to work, and King and Pierce County leadership teams are ready to help us.

The message landed solid for many and I received some excellent feedback. Our regional leadership voiced their pleasure that the Federal Way Chamber was exercising patience and taking deliberate steps to shape an economic development strategy for our Cascadia enterprises and putting the pieces of the puzzle together.

The City of Federal Way is likewise taking some deliberate steps to bring a new focus to the area designated as the “downtown” of Federal Way. All eyes are now fixed on the Performing Arts & Conference Center as a real stimulus to bring a sense of identity to the area.

Working in tandem, the City of Federal Way and the Federal Way Chamber of Commerce are both working diligently to create new energy here in Federal Way. Building a partnership and working toward common goals will secure Federal Way as a true “gem” here in our region (which, by the way, we already know it is!)

Looking forward into 2013, this level of partnership will bring forward incredible results in securing Federal Way’s position as regional “partner” and an exciting and unique community. Are we ready to take on that partnership role? There’s no time like the present!

Before I sign off, let me remind you of the sponsorship opportunities coming up for our 2013 Comcast Golf Classic (July 12, 2013) and our 60th Anniversary Diamond Ball and Auction (November 2, 2013). Both events are a great opportunity to showcase your business and support the Chamber!

Cheers,

Patti

Our philosophy is: “If you don’t know what you do, you can’t change it.” We are detectives, finding the core reason why you have pain and will provide you with the tools for self-care management. Due to high medical costs and limits on visits, it is important that clients have the ability to follow through with self treatment beyond an exercise program. Insurance companies pay us for our expertise and not for the exercise program you can do on your own. Our alternative therapies include Bowen NST, Feldenkrais ® and manual therapies. We specialize in fibromyalgia, chronic pain, post-surgical procedures and sports injuries.

Performing Arts and Conference Center

Plans for Federal Way’s Performing Arts and Conference Center have taken a big leap forward in recent weeks. In fact, the debate to fund the schematic drawings concluded with an almost unanimous vote by City Council and – voila – we have some momentum.

Like any Chamber of Commerce, the Federal Way Chamber deeply appreciates the contribution arts make to any community. Music, theatre, dance and public art projects can add depth to the quality of life for a community like no other sector.

Like any Chamber of Commerce, the Federal Way Chamber is eager to see how the project “pencils out”. Even with SB 1253 (the “Lodging Tax”) passing through the House and Senate with some level of funding to the PACC project, other major sources of funding, however, have yet to be secured.

We invite those interested to join the FW Chamber’s Government Affairs Committee to learn more about the PACC project:

Tuesday, May 14, 8 am at the Chamber office.

Visitors Contribute to Our Economy

While many states spend MILLIONS of dollars to promote their amenities, Washington State put their money elsewhere. And yes, we continue to benefit from visitor dollars here in Washington State but a few key industries are hoping that Washington State will do more.

Like destination resorts (Lake Chelan or Crystal Mountain), or agricultural communities that boast a special offering – like wine! (Walla Walla is booming!), and of course – those cities which host key conference and convention business.

Bigger doesn’t always mean better, but every effort needs the right team helping pull a strategy forward.

Destinations that invest in destination marketing and promotion reap significant economic benefits in terms of more traveler visits, greater travel spending (new money), more jobs created, and higher tax revenues.

A National Park Service report for 2011 showed that the 7 million visitors to national parks in Washington spent $286 million in communities surrounding those parks and this spending supported 4,137 jobs across the state. And be assured that the National and State Parks systems were working off of a blueprint – a strategy.

As a growing interest here in Federal Way (and with the possibility of a new conference center!) the Federal Way Chamber will convene a Marketing Committee as a component of our Economic Development efforts. Exploring the various opportunities to help market the community is a great way to start – and get ahead of the game to insure that if seats are built – they will be filled.

If you are interested in learning more about the Marketing Committee, please call Patti Mullen at 253-838-2605.

Data Science: The Numbers of Our Lives
Excerpt from The New York Times by Clair Cain Miller

Harvard Business Review calls data science “the sexiest job in the 21st century,” and this hot new field promises to revolutionize industries from business to government, health care to academia. The field has been spawned by the enormous amounts of data that modern technologies create—be it the online behavior of Facebook users, tissue samples of cancer patients, purchasing habits of grocery shoppers or crime statistics of cities. Data scientists are the magicians of the Big Data era. They crunch the data, use mathematical models to analyze it and create narratives or visualizations to explain it, then suggest how to use the information to make decisions.

Universities can hardly turn out data scientists fast enough. To meet demand from employers, the United States will need to increase the number of graduates with skills handling large amounts of data by as much as 60 percent, according to a report by McKinsey Global Institute. There will be almost half a million jobs in five years, and a shortage of up to 190,000 qualified data scientists, plus a need for 1.5 million executives and support staff who have an understanding of data.

“This has become relevant to every company,” said Michael Chui, a principal at McKinsey who has studied the field. “There’s a war for this type of talent.”

Because data science is so new, universities are scrambling to define it and develop curriculums. As an academic field, it cuts across disciplines, with courses in statistics, analytics, computer science and math, coupled with the specialty a student wants to analyze, from patterns in marine life to historical texts. The question, said Bill Howe, who teaches data science at the University of Washington, is whether it is even possible to instill in a single person all the skills needed, from statistics to predictive modeling to business strategy. “It remains to be seen,” he said, “but we’re still of the mind that a curriculum that aims to train data scientists is feasible.” He added: “What employers want is someone who can do it all.”

Transportation Budget is a boost for business

Connecting Puyallup to the Port of Tacoma is the push behind the “Complete 167” project.

For several years, the 167 Completion Coalition has targeted this connector as essential to insuring and goods and services keep moving in our state. John Parrott, the Coalition’s co-chair and President of Totem Ocean Trailer Express (HQ here in Federal Way) notes “As a leading region when it comes to our nation’s exports, investment in our transportation infrastructure is key to maintaining our competitive edge. Completion of SR-167 is the single most important transportation project as it relates to improving the Pacific Northwest ability to move people and freight.”

The state Transportation Department estimates a completed SR-167 could create 80,000 permanent jobs. It would also create 948 direct construction jobs and up to 1,990 indirect jobs per year of construction.

Chambers of Commerce across the state endorsed the efforts to fulfill a long list of transportation projects. We extend sincere thanks to Senator Tracey Eide and so many others for their leadership and keeping our economy moving!

Supporting Economic Development

In a communiqué to Senator Eide on April 12th, Federal Way Chamber CEO Patti Mullen urged that the state budget restore possible cuts to the Department of Commerce.

“…I stand alongside those who strongly believe in the value of investing in economic development efforts and urge you to continue to invest in the future of Washington State by securing funding for this vital work.”

Reduced funding to local ADO network (Associate Development Organizations) in the Senate budget severely hinders the State’s ability to compete for the jobs of the future. Economic development organizations serve as catalysts for much needed work to rebuild our regional economy and have supported Federal Way with two key projects: Cascadia MedTech and Cascadia Velocity.
