Did you know?

The Federal Way Farmers Market was originally suggested in 2001 as a "class project" by the local Advancing Leadership Class. Although the class chose another project, the Farmers Market opened in 2006 as a result of many class members who had faith in the project. The Federal Way Farmers Market's opening led to a national recognition, and the market has since become a community hub for local farmers and artists. Established in 1989, The Garden Conservancy program has done more than any other national institution to save and preserve America's exceptional gardens for the education and enjoyment of the public.
